

Eugenia Kopsidi has studied Law at the National and Capodistrian University of Athens. She holds an LL.M. and a Ph.D in Public Law (IKY Fellowships of excellence and Bourse d'excellence Eiffel for postgraduate Studies) from Aix Marseille University. During her PhD research period (2014-2016) she was Research and Teaching Assistant at Aix Marseille University and the University of Créteil-Val de Marne (Paris XII). Her PhD dissertation focuses on the balancing of powers in times of economic crisis.

She has been a Postdoctoral Researcher at the Aristotle University of Thessaloniki working on the constitutional protection of asylum seekers under deportation. She has taught at the Democritus University of Thrace and the Hellenic Open University.

She has published several articles in Greek, English and French in national and European law reviews and collective publications.

From 2016 to 2019, she served as legal advisor to the Greek Ministry of foreign affairs and from 2017 to 2021 she was a member of the National Registry of Lawyers at the Asylum Service.